

Where nature needs us most

Who we are

Biome Conservation (formerly ICFC) is a highly rated, award-winning Canadian charity that funds front-line conservation by local organizations and Indigenous peoples in the tropics and other priority areas in lower-income countries. This is where biodiversity is richest, most under threat, and where dollars go furthest.

Our Mission

To protect and restore nature by partnering with local organizations and Indigenous groups in regions where biodiversity is richest and most under threat.

What we do

- Conserve large, important ecosystems
- Protect marine and freshwater resources and biodiversity
- Support threatened species recovery
- Establish and protect climate corridors and support ecosystem resilience
- Engage and empower local communities and Indigenous peoples

Why it matters

The tropics are where nature is most imperiled.

Conservation dollars have the greatest impact here.

Biodiversity loss and climate change are interconnected global crises. What happens in the tropics affects us all.

2030 Impact Goals

- 20 million hectares protected
- 40,000 hectares of marine protected areas safeguarded
- 600 threatened species protected, including key migratory bird sites
- 2 million hectares restored across climate corridors
- 2.7 million people benefiting from healthier ecosystems
- Six large Indigenous-led conservation projects covering 11M+ hectares
- 70,000 people with sustainable livelihoods supported
- 2,000 people directly employed in conservation

Financial Goal to 2030

To achieve its ambitious conservation goals, Biome aims to mobilize $20 million CAD per year by 2030. Current annual budget: ~ $11 million CAD.

Growth Targets:

- 2026 – Maintain and Restore | $12 M/year
Maintain current operations while restoring recent budget cuts.
- 2028 – Expand for Opportunity | $15M/year
Scale up to capture immediate, high-impact conservation opportunities.
- 2030 – Deliver on the Vision | $20M/year
Fully realize Biome's strategic goal to protect 20 million hectares.

Why Biome?

We support bold, high-impact conservation in places others may overlook. 100% of donations go to programs (our core donors cover admin costs long term). We are agile, risk-tolerant, and long-term partners who work in close partnership with local and Indigenous organizations who know best what conservation actions are needed and have a good plan to carry them out.

Join us

Biome offers donors a chance to make a lasting impact on the world's most important life zones, with full confidence that their support goes directly to where it's needed most.
